

How To Get More Plays On Your Music Site To Get Noticed By Record labels And Get More Fans

Already on MySpace? Want to get more plays on your songs and rise to the top of the charts? Want to get your music heard by important record label executives and hundreds and possibly millions of people all over? In order to get more plays on your songs on your MySpace music site, you have to do a few things. Just like the top artists at the major record labels, running a consistent promotional campaign is key. To be successful, you'll have to maintain consistency to be sure your music gets attention, stands out, gets you the maximum number of listens, and reaches the most people in your MySpace fan base. Most importantly, you have to make sure that anyone who comes to your MySpace music page is listening to your music and telling their friends to come to your page to listen to your music. This shows those big music executives that your music is worth listening to, and that millions of people everywhere are doing just that -- listening to it. To keep new fans coming in on a regular basis, you'll need to make sure that you are uploading different songs regularly. Keep updating your blog with stories about your music and funny or outrageous adventures, and keep rotating the profile picture on your MySpace music site. It's something different that is going to get your page noticed over the rest of the musicians out there. Something new will have your fans returning to your page to read your band updates, look at your recently updated pictures, and tell their friends about your most recent awards, tour dates, or concert venues. Don't be afraid to promote, promote, promote yourself to radio stations, news stations, and other media outlets like magazines or morning shows to get your sound heard. Let them know about how many plays and Views you are getting. The benefits of getting more hits on your music site and more plays on your own songs is the draw of big record executives; they want to know that your music is popular and that you are bringing in a wide variety of fans. The more plays you have, the more attention you will get. It's that simple. It's the number one factor that will drive your name to the top of the MySpace music charts. Fortunately TuneBoom Pro offers many services that were once only available to the major artist and labels at a affordable fee. They even offer a new reliable D0-It-Yourself software and prompt attentive customer service. If you have a lot of friends, it's only really useful if your music is getting at least as many plays as would be natural. If you have 50 plays on each of your four songs, there's a good chance that having 157,983 friends isn't going to get you very far with the record labels. There isn't a large chance of being noticed by a label. In addition, don't forget to auto play your song list so that each of your songs gets an equal amount of playing time. A listener is likely to let the list play if you have the songs automatically play instead of having to hit the play button on each song title after the last one stops. When you put up a new song, design a press release to let your fans know about it. Remember, the more people that come to your page, the more likely it will be that your music will receive more plays. If someone likes what he or she hears, they could play a song on repeat and up that count to more than one per person. And if there are hundreds of people out there that want to listen to your most recent ear-catching tune, the number of plays could rise steadily up and up until success is inevitable.
