

Drawing For Unborn Baby

When you are learning about something new, it is easy to feel overwhelmed by the sheer amount of relevant information available. This informative article should help you focus on the central points. I hope the information presented so far has been applicable. You might also want to consider the following: Drawing is a wonderful way to express your feelings towards the unborn baby. The following article will focus on how to use drawing as a tool to involve the family to bond with your foetus. Drawing is a useful tool to connect with unborn baby. I love to draw for my foetus. I drew a circle with heart shape that represents love, forgiveness and gratitude for unborn baby. After my drawing, I wrote my journal and read it aloud to my baby. He responded by giving me a gentle kick after reading my journal. It showed that he was listening attentively. Besides parents' drawing, we can involve children in the drawing to represent their thinking and feeling towards the foetus. They learn to show their love to their unborn siblings. My eldest son drew a picture of a plane as a gift of love to him. He was looking forward to take a plane with his baby brother in future. My second son drew his toys for the baby. He would like to play and he share his toys with his baby brother. It helps them to show love and care for one another. It also helps them to bond with one another earlier. Younger children would love to draw. You can encourage them to draw and give it as a gift to foetus. You may ask them for any message that they may want to send to baby. You could compile all their drawings and put it in a journal, CD or e-books which can be presented to them as a priceless birthday, wedding gift or family album in future. The whole experience can be thoroughly enjoyable for the children as well as the whole family. Drawing helps my sons to visualise and bond with foetus at the earliest stage. It also helps them to identify their position with the baby and that they are playing an important role for his well-being and development. It teaches them to treasure their sibling and there will be lesser chances of sibling rivalry. It helps them to connect with unborn baby at the earliest stage. Now might be a good-time to write down the main points covered above. The act of putting it down on paper will help you remember what is important about drawing for unborn baby. Draw a picture for your foetus and enjoy yourself during the process of drawing. Disclaimers: The author shares this article based on her personal and work experience and disclaims any responsibility for any liability, losses or damages and/or application of any of contents of this article.

About the Author

Ms Mak Wai Chong, a mother of 3 children, is a freelance trainer and counsellor. She has worked as social worker and counsellor for 17 years. Visit her website at <http://www.WiseParents.net> for prenatal training and parenting information and FREE newsletters.

Source: <http://americanahost.com>